

THE VALUE OF GOOD HEALTH: BUSINESS & LABOR WORKING FOR HEALTH CARE REFORM

A special seminar presented by Connecticut Health Advancement and Research Trust (CHART)

Businesses want to offer good health benefits, attract and retain the best employees and enhance productivity. Unions want to make sure their members are healthy and productive and have access to good health care.

But our broken health care system undermines these shared goals. We are not getting good value for our health care spending.

Advocates, business leaders, unions, legislators, faith leaders, health care providers, foundations and other community leaders are working to find a better way to deliver and promote health in Connecticut.

Everyone who cares about our health care system will want to attend this unique event.

Connecticut Health Advancement and Research Trust (CHART) is a public charity and the parent organization of Universal Health Care Foundation of Connecticut, Inc. CHART is a nonprofit research, development and education organization dedicated to assuring that the health care needs of Connecticut residents are met.

CHART works to provide the public with information about the Connecticut health care system to help them to make thoughtful decisions about how to reform it.
